alQaws for Sexual and Gender Diversity in Palestinian Society is pleased to announce the new dates of the first ever academic school for sexual and gender diversity in Palestine titled:

Sexual Politics in the Colonial Context of Palestine

December 18-20, 2014 // Palestine

With this initiative we aim to develop a deeper understanding of terminology of sexual and gender differences as well as arrive at appropriate definitions that relate to the particularities of Palestinian society. Within a space built on a diversity of viewpoints, ideas and backgrounds we will discuss the following themes:

Sexual and Gender Politics, including theories and key concepts in sex, gender, and different sexual and gender orientations;
The dialectical relationships between social systems and the colonial context of Palestine around sexual discourses and activism;
Sexuality and strategies of decolonization

The program will have a mix of lectures, workshops, and various other activities over a span of three days and is intended for activists, academics, and professionals with academic and intellectual interest in topics related to sexual and gender diversity and the central questions discussed through this program.

The entire program will be conducted in Arabic.
